

ROBERT HESSEN

Senior Research Fellow

Expertise: U.S. economic and business history

The holder of a Ph.D. in American history from Columbia University, Robert Hessen lectures in the Graduate School of Business at Stanford University. In addition, he speaks frequently to business and academic audiences on government regulation of industry. He is the author of three books, including In Defense of the Corporation (1979), now in its fifth printing, and the editor of two others. He is also general editor of the Hoover Archival Documentaries, a multivolume series that publishes historically significant materials from the Hoover Institution Archives.
