

About the Contributors

Jacopo Carmassi is a research fellow at CASMEF, the Arcelli Center for Monetary and Financial Studies, University LUISS Guido Carli, and a fellow of the Wharton Financial Institutions Center, University of Pennsylvania. He was previously an economist at Assonime, the Association of Joint Stock Companies incorporated in Italy, and a researcher at the Italian Banking Association. His research and work activities have focused on banking regulation and supervision and financial crises, including the 2008 global financial crisis, bank capital rules, deposit insurance, the structure of financial supervision, derivatives, bank crisis management and resolution, bank recovery and resolution plans, corporate structures of global systemically important banks, and the banking union in Europe.

Darrell Duffie is the Dean Witter Distinguished Professor in Finance at the Graduate School of Business, Stanford University; a member of the Financial Advisory Roundtable of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York; and a member of the Board of Directors of Moody's Corporation. He serves on the boards of scholarly journals in finance, economics, and mathematics, and was elected president of the American Finance Association for 2009. He is a fellow and member of the Council of the Econometric Society, a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and a research associate of the National Bureau of Economic Research. He recently chaired the Financial Stability Board's Market Participants Group on Reference Rate Reform. He is a coauthor of The Squam Lake Report: Fixing the Financial System (2010). Other recent books include How Big Banks Fail (2010), Measuring Corporate Default Risk (2011), and Dark Markets (2012).

Simon Gleeson is a partner in Clifford Chance's financial services and markets group in London, specializing in financial markets and banking law and regulation, clearing, settlement, and derivatives. His experience includes advising governments, regulators, and public bodies as well as banks, investment firms, fund managers, and other financial institutions on regulatory issues. He is a member of the Financial Stability Board's Legal Advisory Panel on Legal Issues in Cross-Border Resolution; member of the Institute for International Finance's Special Committee on Effective Regulation and chair of its working group on cross-border resolution issues; former member of the UK Financial Markets Law Committee; and adviser to the World Economic Forum on its 2009 report on the New Global Financial Architecture. He has given evidence on financial regulation and bank resolution to parliamentary committees of both the House of Lords and the House of Commons. He is a visiting professor at the University of Edinburgh.

Richard J. Herring is Jacob Safra Professor of International Banking and Professor of Finance at The Wharton School, University of Pennsylvania, where he is also founding director of the Wharton Financial Institutions Center. He is the author of more than 150 articles, monographs, and books and has pursued research funded by grants from the National Science Foundation, Ford Foundation, Brookings Institution, Sloan Foundation, Council on Foreign Relations, and Royal Swedish Commission on Productivity. He served as vice dean and director of the Wharton Undergraduate Division from 1995–2000; from 2000–2006, he was director of the Lauder Institute, a dual-degree program that combines an MBA, an MA in international studies, and foreign-language proficiency. Outside the university, he is cochair of the US Shadow Financial Regulatory Committee and executive director of the Financial Economist's Roundtable. He is also a member of the FDIC Systemic Resolution Advisory Committee, the Systemic Risk Council, and the Hoover Institution Working Group on Resolution Policy.

Dr. Thomas F. Huertas is a partner in the financial services risk practice at EY Global Limited and chairs the firm's global regulatory network of former senior supervisors. He advises major financial firms on regulatory and strategic issues. Before joining EY, he was a member of the executive committee at the UK Financial Services Authority, alternate chair of the European Banking Authority, and a member of the Basel Committee on Banking Supervision. He also held a number of senior positions at Citigroup, including chairman and chief executive, Citibank AG (Germany). He has published extensively on banking and regulatory issues, including his most recent book Safe to Fail: How Resolution Will Revolutionise Banking. He is an adjunct professor at the Institute of Law and Finance at the Johann Wolfgang von Goethe University in Frankfurt, Germany.

Thomas H. Jackson, a professor at the University of Rochester, served as president of the university from 1994 to 2005. Before that, he was vice president and provost of the University of Virginia, which he first joined in 1988 as dean of Virginia's School of Law. He was a professor of law at Harvard from 1986 to 1988 and served on the Stanford University faculty from 1977 to 1986. He clerked for US District Court judge Marvin E. Frankel in New York in 1975–76, and then for Supreme Court Justice (later Chief Justice) William H. Rehnquist in 1976–77. The author of bankruptcy and commercial law texts used in law schools across the country, he served as special master for the US Supreme Court in a dispute involving every state in the country over the disposition of unclaimed dividends held by brokerage houses.

Emily C. Kapur is an attorney working on financial sector litigation and a doctoral candidate in Stanford University's Department of Economics. Her research focuses on legal and economic issues connected to efforts to reform global financial markets. Before graduate school, she spent three years leading the Hewlett Foundation's Nuclear Security Initiative. She received a bachelor's degree in economics from Stanford University, a master's degree from the London School of Economics, where she studied as a Marshall Scholar, and a juris doctorate from Stanford Law School.

William F. Kroener III is counsel at Sullivan & Cromwell LLP. He served as general counsel of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation from 1995 to 2006. His law practice focuses on the supervision and regulation of banks and other regulated financial institutions and their advisers. Kroener served as cochair of the American Bar Association Presidential Task Force on Financial Markets Regulatory Reform (2008–12) and chair of the Banking Law Committee of the American Bar Association Business Law Section (2011–14). He currently serves as an advisory member of the Financial Institutions Committee of the Business Law Section of the State Bar of California. He speaks and writes regularly on financial regulatory topics and has taught as an adjunct professor at Stanford, George Washington, and American University law schools.

Kenneth E. Scott, the Ralph M. Parsons Professor Emeritus of Law and Business at Stanford Law School and a Hoover Institution senior research fellow, is a leading scholar in the fields of corporate finance reform and corporate governance who has written extensively on federal banking regulation. He chairs the Resolution Project on Economic Policy. His current research concentrates on legislative and policy developments related to the current financial crisis, comparative corporate governance, and financial regulation. He is editor (with George Shultz and John Taylor) of Ending Government Bailouts (2010). His consulting experience includes the World Bank, Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, Resolution Trust Corporation, and National Association of Securities Dealers (now FINRA). He is also a member of the Shadow Financial Regulatory Committee, the Financial Economists Roundtable, and the State Bar of California's Financial Institutions Committee. Before joining the Stanford Law School faculty in 1968, he served as general counsel to the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and as chief deputy savings and loan commissioner of California and worked in private practice in New York with Sullivan & Cromwell.

David A. Skeel Jr. is the S. Samuel Arsht Professor of Corporate Law at the University of Pennsylvania Law School. He is the author of The New Financial Deal: Understanding the Dodd-Frank Act and Its (Unintended) Consequences (2011), Icarus in the Boardroom: The Fundamental Flaws in Corporate America and Where They Came From (2005), Debt's Dominion: A History of Bankruptcy Law in America (2001), and numerous articles on bankruptcy, corporate law, Christianity and law, and other topics. Skeel has also written commentaries for the New York Times, Wall Street Journal, Books & Culture, Weekly Standard, and other publications.

John B. Taylor is the George P. Shultz Senior Fellow in Economics at the Hoover Institution and the Mary and Robert Raymond Professor of Economics at Stanford University. He chairs the Hoover Working Group on Economic Policy. An award-winning teacher and researcher specializing in macroeconomics, international economics, and monetary policy, he has served as a senior economist (1976–77) and member (1989–91) of the President's Council of Economic Advisers and as undersecretary of the treasury for international affairs (2001–2005). Taylor's book Getting Off Track: How Government Actions and Interventions Caused, Prolonged, and Worsened the Financial Crisis was one of the first on the financial crisis; he has since followed up with two books on preventing future crises, coediting The Road Ahead for the Fed and Ending Government Bailouts as We Know Them. Before joining the Stanford faculty in 1984, Taylor held positions as a professor of economics at Princeton University and Columbia University.