

Illustrations

Coronation of Leopold II in Prague's St. Vitus's Cathedral	94
An Austrian-German caricature of František Palacký from 1849	120
The Old Czech leaders František Palacký and his son-in-law František Ladislav Rieger	134
“In the Political Smithy,” a Viennese caricature from 1879. Count Heinrich Clam-Martinitz and Rieger hammer away at Count Taafe, forging the “Iron Ring of the Right”	138
A caricature of Tomáš Masaryk during his years as professor at Prague's Czech university	144
Crowds flood Prague's Wenceslas Square on October 28, 1918	171
A moment of relaxation at President Tomáš G. Masaryk's retreat in Topolčianky, Slovakia, autumn 1926, with Masaryk, Edvard Beneš, František Chvalkovský, Karel Čapek, and Antonin Švehla	187

Unwelcome arrivals in Prague, March 15, 1939: the Wehrmacht on Charles Bridge	209
Deputy Reich Protector Reinhard Heydrich views the Bohemian coronation regalia, symbol of Czech statehood, with State President Emil Hacha and other Nazi and Protectorate leaders	213
President Edvard Beneš approves Prime Minister Klement Gottwald's reorganized government on February 25, 1948	231
May Day parade on Wenceslas Square, 1953	237
While it lasted, the largest monument to Stalin in the Soviet Bloc stood in Prague, photographed May 4, 1955	245
Alexander Dubček's reception among the workers at the ČKD factory in 1968	256
Soviet soldiers listen to Czech protests on Prague's streets, August 21, 1968	263
Leading normalizers at an NF meeting on January 27, 1971: Gustav Husák, Ludvík Svoboda, and Lubomír Štrougal	271
Students and riot police face off on National Avenue, November 17, 1989	287
Václav Havel addressing the crowds on Wenceslas Square with the news of the first non-communist government since 1948, December 10, 1989	291
The once and future Czech presidents: President Václav Havel and Prime Minister Václav Klaus at a government meeting, April 1993	311